The international anthropological congress was organised by: the Czech Anthropological Society; Charles University Prague, Faculty of Science, Department of Anthropology and Human Genetics; the Town of Humpolec; the European Anthropological Association; the National Museum in Prague; the Town of Mělník.

The Congress programme was divided in ten sections:

Bioinformatics.

Clinical anthropology, obesitology, endocrinology.

Evolutionary anthropology and primatology.

Growth and development, functional anthropology and kinanthropology.

Human ecology and epidemiology.

Human genom variability.

Historical anthropology and paleopathology, forensic anthropology.

Locomotor system.

Social and cultural anthropology.

Social history and anthropology.

The presented contributions will be successively published in the journal Anthropologie. Due to the high number of authors who have accepted our proposal to publish their texts, selected contributions will be appearing in the years 2003–2004.

This issue brings articles from sections Growth and development, Functional anthropology and kinanthropology, Evolutionary anthropology and primatology, Human ecology and epidemiology, Historical anthropology and paleopathology, Forensic anthropology, Social history and anthropology.

On behalf of the journal Anthropologie, we thank all the authors for their texts and cooperation.
